FEMA COVID-19 Pandemic Operational Guidance for the 2020 Hurricane Season

In preparing for the 2020 hurricane season, this document provides actionable guidance to State, Local, Tribal & Territorial officials to prepare for response and recovery operations and encourages personal preparedness measures amidst the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic. While this document focuses on hurricane season preparedness, most planning considerations can also be applied to any disaster operation in the COVID-19 environment, including no-notice incidents, spring flooding and wildfire seasons, and typhoon response.

Information presented in this document regarding FEMA's operating posture should serve as a baseline for SLTT partners.

Telehealth: A New Idea For Your Family Preparedness Toolkit

By Joann Lowry, Interagency Recovery Coordinator, FEMA Region II

You probably never heard much about telehealth prior to 2020.

The very idea of receiving your health care via a mobile device or computer was simply not possible for most, especially since government and insurance company regulations often opposed this option. Seldom has an issue changed so fast and convincingly as telehealth following the COVID-19 outbreak. An industry struggling to find mass acceptance and traction is now the “new normal” – all in a few dramatic months.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) defines telehealth, also known as telemedicine, as the use of electronic information and telecommunications technologies to support and promote long-distance clinical health care, patient and professional health-related education, and public health and health administration. This can be accomplished by videoconferencing via the internet, the digital transfer of medical images or streaming media with which we're all now familiar. Click here to read the full article.

URGENT INFORMATION FOR NEW JERSEY TENANTS DURING THE COVID-19 PANDEMIC

- There is currently an eviction moratorium until December 27, 2020. That means that you cannot be evicted (locked out of your home) until after December 27, 2020, except in rare circumstances. This date may be shortened or extended by the Governor.¹ - Rent is still due. If you can, you should continue to pay your rent in order to avoid eviction when the moratorium ends. - Even though there is an eviction moratorium, your landlord may still be able to file an eviction complaint against you in court. However, most landlord/tenant trials are currently on hold which means that most trials will not be scheduled until further notice. - Although most landlord/tenant trials are currently not taking place, some counties are scheduling virtual (online) settlement conferences between landlords and tenants to give landlords and tenants the opportunity to settle their cases. These settlements are VOLUNTARY which means that you DO NOT have to settle your case. If you do not want to settle your case, just tell the court staff that you do not want to settle and you can then leave the virtual conference. Your case will be set for trial when the courts start holding trials again. At that point, you may still have an opportunity to settle your case. - Unless the court finds that there is some kind of emergency, the eviction moratorium prevents lockouts until December 27, 2020 even if tenants have agreed to move out sooner and even when a non-emergency court order authorizes removal of a tenant. You should call the police if your landlord tries to lock you out or turns off your water or power to try to force you to leave. - You should seek legal advice if you have any questions regarding your rights as a tenant. If you cannot afford an attorney, you can contact a legal services organization such as Legal Services of New Jersey at (888) 576-5529, Volunteer Lawyers for Justice at (973) 943-4754, the Community Health Law Project (for individuals with disabilities) at (973) 275-1175, or the City of Newark's Office of Tenant Legal Services (if you are a Newark tenant) at (973)877-9424.

1 There is also a federal eviction moratorium which lasts through December 31, 2020, but you must meet very specific conditions and take certain steps in order to qualify. If the state eviction moratorium is not extended beyond December 27, 2020, the federal eviction moratorium may apply to you. If you have any questions about the federal or state eviction moratoriums, you should seek legal advice as specified above.

IMPORTANT NOTICE REGARDING BABY FORMULA:

UNDER NO CIRCUMSTANCES should parents water down baby formula because the exact formulation is needed to give babies enough calories and adding water to formula can cause a dangerous drop in baby's sodium level. This could lead to serious complications such as seizures.

If you find yourself in an emergency where you need formula and are unable to access it through deliver, the American Academy of Pediatrics recommends the following:

Feeding America is a non-profit network of 200 food banks. Many provide free baby food and infant formula. Find your local food bank.
